It is currently used as a boutique hotel, with its 11 en suite bedrooms and splendid period details.making it an appealing choice for guests. The ground floor provides a large, open communal conservatory and dining room, which is ideal space for entertaining guests. The light, airy conservatory has a glass roof welcoming plenty of sunlight, while the dining room has a bar area and plenty of space for seating. The ground floor also has a separate sitting room, a family room and a study, with each room displaying a wealth of different character features, from exposed timber beams to impressive fireplace and panelled walls. There is also a well-equipped and spacious kitchen, with all the facilities required to cater for guests, while storage is available in the bottle store and the cellar.

There are four well-presented bedrooms on the ground floor, all of which have en suite shower rooms. The ground floor layout lends itself for dividing into guest accommodation and a separate apartment for the owner/manager, while two staircases leading to the first floor provide a further element of flexibility in the layout and usage of the property. Upstairs there are a further seven double bedrooms, four of which have en suite bathrooms, with the other three featuring en suite shower rooms. One of the bedrooms also benefits from its own dressing room. The property is ideally setup for continued use as a hotel, or could be converted into one large, luxury main residence.
