

HALSEY STREET

CHELSEA SW3

Rare to the market, a well-presented Grade II listed four-bedroom family house offering bright well-planned accommodation, leading onto a pretty landscaped west-facing paved garden. Notably, this end of terrace house was the former home of Elizabeth David CBE (Cookery Writer) and benefits from extra width throughout the house; noticeably in the first-floor drawing room, but it also has a particularly large conservatory extension giving this wonderful house an unparalleled
family living space to the lower ground floor.
In addition, this is the only house on Halsey Street with a full sheer brick-fronted third floor, rather than mansard extension.

Elizabeth David CBE (1913-1992) was famous for introducing post-war Britain to a new vision of continental food and is credited for a demand for French provincial cookware, counting Albert and Michael Roux as her customers, as well as being credited as a leading gastronomic influence on leading chefs such as Rick Stein, Terence Conran, Nigel Slater, Gordon Ramsey, Jamie Oliver, Prue Leith and Clarissa Dickson-Wright. She wrote, cooked and entertained, often with a glass of wine, in the kitchen of 24 Halsey Street.

LOCATION

Halsey Street is a particularly quiet and attractive wide street running between Milner Street and Cadogan Street, perfectly situated equidistant between Sloane Square, South Kensington and Knightsbridge.
