The property

Wyndale House, which was built in 1748 and is unlisted, is a highly attractive detached period home with four bedrooms and comfortable reception rooms, combining character features with elegant, understated contemporary fittings. There are three well-presented reception rooms on the ground floor, including the well-proportioned drawing room with its timber beams overhead, wooden flooring and grand open fireplace. Plenty of natural light is welcomed through the triple aspect, which includes French doors leading to the garden. There is also a sitting room in which to relax to the front, with exposed stone wall and fireplace fitted with a woodburning stove, while the welcoming entrance hall is spacious and ideal for use as a dining room.

Additionally, on the ground level, the kitchen has been recently renovated and includes sleek modern units to base and wall level, as well as an integrated oven, hob and extractor hood. The adjoining utility room provides plenty of further storage, as well as space for appliances including an American-style fridge freezer.

Upstairs there are four double bedrooms of similar proportions, including the principal bedroom, which has windows to the front and rear, as well as an en suite bathroom with a bathtub and a large separate shower unit. One further bedroom has an en suite shower room and there is a family shower room.

Outside

The house has a west-facing garden and enjoys sun all day round, with stunning views of gardens and surrounds from all aspects. At the front, well-stocked beds of perennials and shrubs frame steps to the entrance. A gravel driveway provides parking and access to a detached double garage offering parking, storage, or workshop space. Most of the garden lies to the rear, enjoying afternoon and evening sun. A patio across the back of the house is ideal for al fresco dining. Steps lead up to an upper lawn and mature fruit orchard, with a large Rhino greenhouse, all enclosed by mature hedgerow. To the side are a heated swimming pool, pump house, large sun terrace and summer house, used as a guest room. Perfect to relax and take in the views. The house benefits from 20 solar panels, providing the power for the pool.
