A most charming and refurbished,
one bedroom former artist’s studio

This superb first floor former artist’s studio, has been sympathetically refurbished and remodelled to create the most charming Chelsea apartment.

The Handsome Arts and Crafts style red-brick building was constructed in 1894 and historically was a working artist’s studio. The property has recently undergone a complete refurbishment and has been cleverly improved to create more living space; it is beautifully presented throughout. The centrepiece studio room, with 4m high ceilings and huge bay windows, is particularly impressive.

Created in 1877, Tite Street quickly established itself as an artistic quarter of Chelsea and the surrounding areas.

Location

Running south from Tedworth Square to the Chelsea Embankment, the southern section of the street is home to some particularly special and important architecture.

The National Army Museum and Chelsea Physic Garden are both on your doorstep as are the private grounds of Burton Court.

The fashionable King’s Road with all its boutique shops, bars and restaurants is less than half a mile away.

Sloane Square underground station (Circle and District Line) is 0.6 miles away or the river taxi from Cadogan Pier into the City is 0.4 miles away.
